Outside Campus

Wilberforce University student shot and killed:

WILBERFORCE, Ohio -- A female student at Wilberforce University was killed in a campus shooting Tuesday, and police were seeking a male suspect.

Greene County Sheriff Jerry Erwin said witnesses told deputies they saw the woman arguing with a man in the parking lot in front of Wright Hall and then begin running from him.

The woman was shot at least twice, apparently with a handgun, Erwin said. She was dead by the time deputies arrived, he said.

The suspect, who was not a Wilberforce student, fled in a car and was being sought by authorities, he said.

Erwin declined to identify the victim or the suspect. He said the two had known each other.

University spokeswoman Rosalyn Lake said the victim had attended summer classes for incoming freshmen at Wilberforce and was a resident in a campus dormitory. Fall term at the school began last week.

Lake said students, faculty and staff members at the school were shocked by the shooting.

She said classes for Tuesday and Wednesday were canceled and mental-health officials were brought to the campus for students who wanted counseling.

About 800 students attend Wilberforce, which is located about 15 miles west of Dayton.

We're dropping like flies:

WASHINGTON -- More Americans died in 1991 than ever before, but life expectancy at birth rose to a record 75.5 years, the government's record-keepers reported Tuesday.

Heart disease, cancer and stroke remain the three big killers, claiming 64 percent of the 2,169,518 lives lost in 1991, the National Center for Health Statistics said.

Chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases -- including bronchitis, asthma and emphysema -- overtook accidents as the fourth leading cause of death. That was due in part to an 8 percent drop in motor vehicle fatalities.

AIDS moved up from tenth to ninth place on the list.

Some 29,555 people died due to HIV infection, with men outnumbering women among the victims by more than 7 to 1.

Merchants Fair promotes businesses

The BG News/Teresa Thomas

by Kelly Duquin
student life reporter

The all-day Merchants Fair attracted thousands of University students to see what the 60 local businesses had to offer. Many businesses gave out free samples, brochures and coupons in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom. The event was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, The Downtown Business Association, The BG News and the University.

Several local businesses distributed pamphlets, free samples and coupons to several thousand University students Tuesday at the fourth annual Merchants Fair in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom.

The purpose of the fair was not only to promote area businesses, but to help out the students too, sponsors said.

"This event brought the students, faculty and staff together to view what is available in the community," said Joan Gordon, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce.

Representatives from 60 local businesses were at the fair to promote their businesses and answer questions of students and local residents.

Each business that participated in the event was required to be a member of either the Downtown Business Association or the Chamber of Commerce.

"This year the merchants improved marketing and promotions to reach the clientele that came through," Gordon said.

Five thousand people attended the fair last year, and with more than 1,000 through the door by noon Tuesday, Gordon said she was optimistic the fair would help businesses prosper.

Focus on women's health

September designated month to examine female wellness

by Melissa Lipowski
health reporter

In order to focus on issues surrounding women's health, the state of Ohio has designated the entire month of September as Women's Health Month.

The Student Health Center, in accordance with other Ohio health care providers, is having a month-long awareness program which targets recent developments in medical technology and focuses on specific issues which University women can relate to.

University Health Services is focusing on issues which affect women including sexually transmitted diseases, contraceptive devices and sexual assault, according to Jeanne Wright, director of the Wellness Center.

"While some diseases and issues may affect women as well as men, there are many hormonal and biological differences between the sexes which cause different reactions and responses," she said.

Wright said recent studies have shown that women have been left out of many medical studies, including those on sexually transmitted diseases, drug testing and alcohol abuse.

"Due to the fact that women and men have a different metabolism, women are more likely to suffer from the effects of alcohol than men," she said.

Therefore, Wright said women should be more aware and cautious of the amount of alcohol they consume.

According to Wright, women should also be aware of diseases and how to protect themselves. They must be taught to recognize the symptoms of breast cancer early enough to receive effective treatment, she said.

On Sept. 14 and 15, the Health Services will provide a display in the Union foyer devoted to issues relating to women's health. The display will include information on the breast self-examinations, exercise, eating disorders and nutritional issues including calcium intake and osteoporosis.

On Sept. 23 and 24, the Health Services will provide students with a health and fitness tour. The tour will highlight issues and developments that have been particular to the past year. Some of the topics being addressed, according to Wright, include the development of the female condom and the effects of AIDS upon women.

The Health Services will present a guest speaker on Sept. 30, who will discuss recent ideas in con-

Man claims to be security guard, arrested for theft

by Joe Peiffer
police reporter

I must've taken a wrong turn at Albuquerque -- or at least on the Ohio turnpike.

That's what a 31-year-old resident of Warren, Ohio must have thought after police officers explained to him early Sunday morning that he was reporting to work in the wrong city.

After drinking heavily in Cleveland, Todd M. Peterman came to Bowling Green, entered a Days Inn claiming he was a security guard there and began fixing a snack in the motel's kitchen. After allegedly stealing cocktail wieners, he was arrested for burglary and theft.

According to Julie Thomas, an employee at Days Inn, 1550 E. Wooster St., Peterman entered the motel at about 2:30 a.m. and insisted he was a security guard there.

"He told us he was our security guard and that he was staying there," she said.

Thomas said the employees of the Days Inn repeatedly asked Peterman to leave. She also said she tried to tell Peterman he was in Bowling Green.

"I think he thought Bowling Green was a suburb of Cleveland," Thomas said. "It was pretty obvious he didn't have a clue."

After loitering for a while Peterman allegedly began poking around the kitchen area. He then removed several items from a freezer and placed them outside of an emergency exit.

"Basically he stole frozen cocktail wieners," Thomas said.

"Apparently he was pretty hungry."

On the way to jail, Peterman allegedly told the arresting officer that he was in a bar in the Cleveland area when a friend asked him to come to a party in Bowling Green. He also reportedly said he remembered none of the events after leaving the bar until he was arrested.

"He told us he was our security guard and that he was staying there. I think he thought Bowling Green was a suburb of Cleveland. It was pretty obvious he didn't have a clue."

Julie Thomas, Days Inn employee

When Peterman was asked what city he was in he replied "Cleveland." The arresting officer then informed Peterman he was in Bowling Green and he "acted surprised."

He provided police with the name and number of a Cleveland security firm that confirmed Peterman works for them. However, a representative of the firm said it has no contracts with Days Inn either in Cleveland or in Bowling Green.

The representative said Peterson may not be employed there much longer.

Hurricane Emily charges: residents and tourists flee

by Estes Thompson
The Associated Press

MANTEO, N.C. -- Surging seas crashed onto the fragile Outer Banks island chain Tuesday as Hurricane Emily charged ashore with wind whistling around its eye at up to 115 mph.

Hurricane warnings were in effect along the northern coast of North Carolina to Cape Hatteras, Del. Farther to the north, heavy surf caused minor flooding along the New Jersey shore and the southern shore of New York's Long Island.

Tens of thousands of residents and tourists had fled the Outer Banks, the chain of narrow, low-lying sandy islets off the North Carolina coast. To the north, in Virginia, a swimmer was missing in heavy surf. The Virginia National Guard was on alert and residents of some low-lying areas were urged to consider leaving.

"The waves are incredible," said Finis Craft II, a clerk at Blackbeard's Lodge on Ocracoke island. The owners left but he stayed behind, watching the storm from the safety of a third-floor suite.

At 3 p.m., the center of Emily was about 45 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, where the Outer Banks extended farthest to sea, or near latitude 34.7 north and longitude 75.2 west.

The storm's path had curved toward the north and it was moving near 11 mph.

The eye wall, the region of strongest wind around the hurri-over Hatteras by late afternoon, said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center.

"Then the center is expected to skirt along the coast through the night, finally moving up off of the Maryland area and then turning rapidly northeast sometime tomorrow," Sheets said.

That turn to the northeast would take the storm back out to sea.

Sheets estimated the maximum sustained wind speed around the eye at close to 115 mph as the storm gathered energy from the warm Gulf Stream off shore.

By mid-afternoon, wind was blowing at a sustained 54 mph at the Diamond Shoals light tower, 14 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras.

Solutions needed for Founders hall

An alternative living experience and a hall like no other -- that is how living in Founders residence hall was described last year when students were standing in line for hours to apply to live in the renovated (and more expensive) hall.

Founders opened two weeks ago amid much interest from the University and local community. In many ways, it is the state-of-the-art facility administrators and housing officials said it would be.

However, there are some problems with the facility that we at The News do not want to see overlooked; and we hope that sooner, rather than later, they will be resolved.

Our biggest concern is with the electronic security system that residents access with their own personal entry devices to prevent non-residents from entering the residential wings of the complex.

While the intention is good and testing probably was done on the system, more thought and time should have gone into this. Some residents have found themselves temporarily prevented from entering their hall because they did not know when the devices were distributed and were not told how they worked. Others have become frustrated when upon using their devices, they still cannot access certain doors.

There are several doors which have the system installed at their entrances but do not work when the device is applied. What is the point of having a protective system if the system does not even allow residents to enter the designated areas?

When the device does actually work, how can residents be ensured that non-residents do not enter? Anyone can simply enter through a doorway when a resident activates the device. After all, most students have been brought up with manners to hold the door for others, not question what business they have being in the building.

We understand that the residents of Founders are going to be guinea pigs for all of the new technology. However, some basic maintenance problems are occurring which should not. Until last week, most bathrooms only had cold water and many showers continued to leak. Some residents have even discovered that their showers have to be reconstructed and were told this would not occur until December.

Others still do not have blinds on their windows and instead have had to put bed sheets on their windows -- not very classy for a sophisticated living experience.

With any major renovation, setbacks are going to occur causing details to have to be completed later than scheduled and adjustments to be made.

However, with a facility that has new features for the entire University to take pride in, we believe that more time should have been spent to improve all the details rather than rushing to complete the job, leaving imperfections and frustrated residents.

Beavis and Butt-head dying fad

Weekly Columnist

an intelligent artist.

Perhaps it's a sad thing when someone goes to the point of calling such a stupid show a work of art, and sadder when the same person tears apart the show for meaning. But the fear of censorship calls for action.

The show depicts all the stupid things that young people do or think of doing. We've all heard of children who laugh at anything remotely dirty, who pick their nose and do cruel and mean things to each other.

Mike Judge knows young peo-

"Most people who sit at the TV to catch the latest antics of the two troubled youngsters find themselves comfortably entertained, perhaps tickled, and most always grossed out."

Creator Mike Judge, who has a degree in physics from the University of California, not only created a funny, entertaining and somewhat sick cartoon, but also created a mirror of society's demented mentality.

If indeed the young of America are tuning in to Beavis and Butt-Head, it is a sick kind of justice that most of those kids are looking at themselves, and adults are looking at the way they were when they were young.

ple well, and is indeed making fun of them -- and they are laughing at themselves -- two very ugly kids with low evil laughs who watch TV all day and act out some of the things they see. Sound familiar? If young people do act out the antics of Beavis and Butt-Head it just proves Judge's point even more -- we need to better educate America's youth.

Remembering my days in high school, I vividly knew the prototypes of Beavis and Butt-Head.

Living in the hillbilly high school that mine was, cats weren't as well liked as dogs and I've seen many cruel things done by others to them.

I've seen the pull-my-finger routine, and even remember some of the things my own brother would find in our backyard (like frogs) to dissect. A little of Beavis and Butt-Head is in everyone. Activists should be concerned, but not with the censorship of a stupid cartoon, which is a silly piece of art.

Censorship is never a good answer, except for extremes (pornography). Basically people pay for cable, so they pay for Beavis and Butt-Head -- an option everyone has.

Pay or don't pay, or just change the channel. It's been heard before, but it works.

Activists have other things that they need to focus their attention on. The heart of the problems are within the people and the education of the people. Censoring one man's interpretation of the world is not going to solve problems, only bury them away where no one has to worry about them and come to a realization of the kinds of things people do.

Soon enough, Beavis and Butt-head will become an old item to viewers, and something new will surface. "Uh huh, uh huh ... that was cool" will soon be "not so cool" and what is to come next may even be more stupid.

letters to the editor

The BG News:

This is a first warning to freshman students and a strong reminder to veteran students. This is a liberal school, so begin the long process of opening your mind and abandoning your bigotry now.

I'm a fifth year senior at BG, and I'm tired of hearing anti-racism and anti-gay campaigns, but I know I'll have to hear it for a fifth time. That's because racial slurs and the like have been reported on campus already this year.

If you are one of these people, or even if you are uncomfortable socializing with blacks, gays, Jews, or any other "minority" on campus, YOU are the minority. There are strict rules to punish you for rudely acting on bigoted opinions.

Educate yourself. Otherwise, your bigoted feelings will come back to haunt you. That's the way things go around here.

The BG News:

Mrs. Amy Miller:
We have never seen your home, but it must be quite lovely if your fellow Bowling Green residents are asking to live in it! You should be flattered! Just because they are young people doesn't mean that they will destroy it.

While we are sympathetic to your illness, we are not sympathetic to your choice of residence. Common sense would dictate that if you have noise-induced epilepsy, then you would choose to live someplace quiet, like a farm, where your nearest neighbor is two miles away.

Certainly, common sense dictates that you wouldn't move into a college neighborhood.

It is not the young people's fault that there is not ample parking in Bowling Green. We had no part in deciding that. Maybe Troup Avenue should be two-sided parking. Then it wouldn't be possible to go 35 mph.

While we are on the subject, we highly doubt that anyone can accelerate to 60 mph, much less 70, in the space of one city block.

People of all ages exceed the speed limit. "Our (BG natives?!) laws and ordinances" are not only yours, but also ours (young people's).

Mrs. Miller, have you forgotten that the University employs many people from this area (natives, as you termed them)? Do you know where the University gets the money to pay their wages? Much of it comes from college students' tuition and other fees.

We go to school here, live here, work here, and spend our money here. That means tax dollars for OUR town. The fact that some students are destructive, loud, and disorderly does not imply that all of us are.

We do not appreciate being treated as second-class citizens just because stereotypes about our age group by narrow-minded persons such as yourself.

In general, we happen to like the city of Bowling Green, and we are not going anywhere. This is a free country. We must all learn to live with people different from ourselves.

CORRECTION

In Tuesday's issue of the News, the article entitled "University without Policy" contained some misinformation. The Wisconsin policy was ruled unconstitutional because it was believed to limit the first amendment right of freedom of association, rather than freedom of expression, as was reported.

Also, the proposed policy against intimate student/faculty relationships was proposed by the University's faculty senate committee -- not the University.

Senior receives annual award

by Courtney Gangemi administration reporter

The Administrative Staff Council awarded the Administrative Staff Scholarship to a University student Monday afternoon at their annual reception in the Alumni Room of the University Union.

Tom Garey, a double major in geography and secondary education, received the $1000 scholarship.

Students who apply for the scholarship must be a full or part-time student and have two more semesters remaining before graduation. The individual selected must rank in the top 10 percent of their college, and demonstrate unmet financial need, along with being active in various service and leadership positions in the Bowling Green community.

Garey, a senior, is involved with Alpha Lambda Delta, the University Honors Program and the Honors Student Association. He was selected from more than 180 applications, according to Susan Darrow, associate director of the honors program.

The council is the legislative body for administrative staff members. Each year they host the reception for all staff members, according to Ann Bowers, former chairwoman of the council.

"Administrative Staff Council sponsors [the] reception for administrative staff to get together and meet each other," Bowers said.

The 1994-95 staff will be governed by Greg Jordan, associate director of recreational sports. Pat Green, administrative director, will be the chairwoman-elect and Beverly Stearns, assistant to the dean of the library, will serve as secretary.

Fraternity rush begins this week

Process now more informal

by Kelly Duquin
student life reporter

Male students wishing to join the University greek system begin their rush proceedings today, using a system which differs greatly from the formal process used by the sorority chapters in August.

In an attempt to make the process more informal, representatives from the 19 fraternity chapters will congregate in tents on the Union Oval to meet with interested students, said Gary Savage, vice president of Rush on the Interfraternity Council.

"The purpose of the fraternity men at the oval is to promote the unity of our greek system and show that we are working together to make overall improvements," Savage said.

The next event, Rush Information Night on Sept. 7 in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom, will further the atmosphere of informality.

"Fraternity rush has never been quite this informal," Savage said. "We've discarded the suits and taken the casual route to stress that everyone is welcome to participate."

The actual rush parties will take place Sept. 8 through 14. All of the chapters will open their houses to meet prospective members, in order to familiarize them with their fraternity. Chapters without houses will assign a designated meeting place.

The parties occur at night in order to avoid conflict with classes.

"The men that visit each chapter are in no way obligated. There is no time limit, the rushees can stay as long as they like and we have alleviated all sources of pressure," Savage added.

Sorority Rush, which occurred two weeks ago, has a more formal process with a full itinerary of events and functions for interested members.

Prospective sorority members returned a week before classes began and attended four different rush events.

Each participant received printouts which listed the order of which house to visit with an allotted amount of time.

"The Panhellenic Council controls and structures formal rush to emphasize and maintain fairness," said Tami Boback, vice president of Rush on the Panhellenic Council.

Formal rush has taken place since the existence of sororities at the University.

"If the sorority chapters started a process similar to that of the fraternities, it would be culture shock," Boback said. "It would be difficult for the women to handle recruitment during school as opposed to the summer."

The Panhellenic Council handles all recruitment in the summer by sending out flyers and brochures. This has managed to keep the numbers of new members consistent in recent years, Boback said.

During sorority rush, the attire began as casual and each day progressed to a final formal dress event.

In the end, receiving a bid from the sorority was a mutual agreement, while a fraternity bid was a pick and choose format.

Although the rush processes differ between sororities and fraternities, both formats have been successful, according to Adam Roth, president of Interfraternity Council.

"It is difficult to compare the separate methods of rush," said Adam Roth, president of the Interfraternity Council. "Everyone tries to stay consistent with what works."

Greek life offers some advantages

by Kelly Duquin
student life reporter

Greek systems vary from campus to campus and the University's system has much more to offer than good times. Many students wonder if it is worth paying a fee to become a member of a fraternity or sorority.

For the majority of greek students being a part of the system has been a beneficial experience.

"Being greek opens up opportunities for invaluable friendships, educational resources, community service and basically comes down to people helping each other to become better people," said Adam Roth, president of the Interfraternity Council.

Each individual greek chapter on campus has its own executive board and council. Student members have positions including community service coordinator, scholarship chairperson and intermural coordinator. These officers plan events and activities revolving around their title.

"Being in a fraternity has given me opportunities with leadership skills," said Alan Pawlowski, president of Phi Gamma Delta. "A national leadership convention occurs every year where delegates from our chapters throughout the country attend."

"Becoming a member of a sorority boosted my self-esteem and I was able to do things that I always wanted to do," said Julie Graham, president of the Panhellenic Council. "I developed deftness in communicating with others and became more outgoing."

Each chapter hosts community service functions called philanthropies where the money made is donated to local and national charities. Such charities include the American Heart Association and the United Way. Many greeks also volunteer in soup kitchens, nursing homes and hospitals.

"The greek system must work collectively to help the community," said Katie Shanahan, assistant director of greek life. "My goal is to get everyone together and enhance the unity."

Man sues bar for serving him

by Shari L. Veleba
courts reporter

A Pemberville man has filed suit against College Station because he and another man fought after drinking at the bar.

David Evans stated in a legal complaint filed Monday he was "visibly intoxicated" when he was served "large amounts of alcohol" by employees of the bar April 6, 1993.

Evans said the bar is responsible for the fight because it trained employees "so as to allow them to serve the quantity of alcohol which they served" to the other man.

He also charges the bar did not supervise its employees well and acted irresponsibly in letting the two men leave the bar.

After leaving the bar, the other man assaulted him, Evans charged. The man broke Evans' nose and caused other injuries to his face, eyes and neck, according to the complaint.

Richard E. Zerner, Evans' attorney, said Evans was "severely injured due to the negligence of the tavern employees who served him."

A police report stated officers found the two men in the parking lot of the Buckeye Budget Motor Inn, 1470 E. Wooster St., after the manager reported a fight there.

The report stated Evans was on the ground, unconscious and bleeding.

While Evans was taken to Wood County Hospital and was admitted for treatment, the other man was arrested and charged with felonious assault.

The other man is not named as a defendant in the suit.

Betty Whigg, owner of College Station, 1616 E. Wooster St., said she believed Evans was not intoxicated at the time.

"As far as I know, he was not intoxicated," she said.

Whigg said she could not comment further on the matter until she spoke with managers at the business.

Evans could not be reached for comment.

Zerner said Evans is not asking for a specific amount of money for his injuries.

"We've asked the court to decide an amount," Zerner said.

Although the College Station, Inc., is the only defendant named in the suit, Zerner said employees may be added to the suit as their names become available.

College Station, Inc., has 28 days to respond to the complaint.

Zerner has requested a jury trial and said the suit could take a long time to settle.

"This matter won't be resolved for a long time," Zerner said.

Fight for Uno Vision renewed

Wood Cable to consider committee demands for Latin network

by Tara Stubbs
general assignment reporter

Following Wood Cable's addition of the Black Entertainment Television network last year, a local group is renewing its push for a Spanish-language station.

The Latin Network Committee is asking the company to add Uno Vision ("One Vision") to the Bowling Green cable system.

Dave Garcia, a University admissions counselor and representative of the Latin Network Committee, said the committee formed two years ago but will be renewing its efforts since BET was added to the system last fall.

Garcia said he believes the cable company does not meet the needs of the Spanish-speaking subscribers.

Larry Miller, general manager of Wood Cable, said while the company is aware of the group's efforts, it will not add channels until it completes negotiations to keep the four major local stations on the system.

He said a 1992 law putting new requirements on cable companies and the local stations they carry has caused uncertainty about which networks the company will be able to carry and whether it will have to pay to carry them.

Miller said all negotiations between Wood and the local stations must be completed before it can add or delete any other programming.

He said stations added last spring -- the Science Fiction Network, the American Movie Channel and a video rental channel -- were paid for by a rate increase made in the fall of 1992.

"We need to take care of the problems caused by the New Cable Act," Miller said. "We are aware of [the committee's] requests."

Garcia said the network committee wants Uno Vision added so it can be used as a learning tool for college and high school classes. He said he believes the network would also help educate people about Spanish-speaking ethnic groups.

He said the network's programming includes news, talk shows and music videos.

trapeutic technology.

"There are so many forms of contraception available to women at the present time that women definitely need more information before they can make the right choice on which form is best for them," Wright said.

During the month of September, students will also receive a publication from the University's sexual violence committee which focuses on sexual assault.

"The publication addresses issues of safety, sexual assaults and the concerns of victims and friends of those who have been sexually assaulted," Wright said.

The University's Women's Clinic is having an open house on Sept. 22. Women who attend the festivities will receive gift packages which will include various health-related information, she said.

Students who attend the University are fortunate to have a Women's Clinic on campus and women should be encouraged to use this to their advantage, she said.

While there may be a lot of information offered to women, Wright said it will not be of any use until women learn to respect themselves and become active in their own health care decisions.

"Every woman is in charge of her own body," Wright said. "She should make full use of the information that is available to her."

The St. Vincent Medical Center in Toledo is also hosting special programs to celebrate Women's Health Month and will open the hospital's Women's Life Center, according to Rhonda Stockard, assistant vice president of women's and children's health services at St. Vincent's.

"The focus of the Women's Life Center will be to provide services and programs that address the needs of women and children," Stockard said.

On Sept. 7, the hospital will feature a speaker discussing how women can juggle their many social roles.

In addition, the medical center will have a seminar on "Women, Stress, and Balancing Your Health". This presentation will feature Dr. Holly Atkinson, the medical correspondent for the NBC's Today show and will address stress-related health problems which affect women, Stockard said.

"Because of the many active roles women play in society, women must learn to take better care of themselves," she said.

It is important for women to have an active partnership in their health care, Wright said.

"If women feel that a health care complaint has been ignored, we want to encourage women to be consistent and voice their complaints," Wright said. "If they feel they are not getting answers, they need to turn to other alternatives, whether it be looking for a different physician or finding a different health care service."

"The economy is also boosted in the respect that freshmen who are not aware of what stores are downtown will now know and seek out some of their services," Gordon said.

"Walking through here I discovered stores that I had no idea were in Bowling Green," said freshman Sheila Speckman.

Speckman was also happy with the free highlighters, shampoo, perfume and decals she received.

New local businesses also had the opportunity to get more recognition by attending.

"This has been an invaluable chance to let everyone know we are coming in," said Ralph Balber, co-owner of Barry Bagels. "I have met wonderful people and am very excited to open."

Balber also noted that he had handed out 50 dozen bagels in an hour and would probably go through a few hundred throughout the day.

Inventors hall finds a home

The Associated Press

AKRON -- After five years of fund raising, the National Invention Center has collected enough money to begin building a permanent home for the National Inventors Hall of Fame.

"Although fund-raising is still continuing, we now have $30 million of the estimated $38 million construction cost," center spokesman Tom Hollingsworth said Tuesday. "And, that's enough to take care of the building itself."

The remaining $8 million will be spent on exhibits, administration and program development, he said.

A groundbreaking ceremony and other festivities for the building, to be called Inventure Place, were planned for Tuesday night. Construction was to begin Wednesday.

"We are estimating about 22 months for construction, which would mean we could be in operation as early as mid-1995," Hollingsworth said.

Designed by architect and Akron native James Stewart Polshak, Inventure Place will be dominated by a "Great Wall" featuring five tiers of exhibits. A stainless steel "sail" will arch from a public plaza to the wall. An exhibit and workshop area will be located under the plaza.

The 77,000-square-foot building will include 29,000 square feet of exhibit space. In special exhibits and workshop areas, visitors will be able to design, build and test their own solutions to sets of problems.

Mayor Don Plusquellic said the creative aspects of the hall are its greatest benefit to Akron.

"Obviously it will help bring tourists to the area and help us economically, but more importantly, it will provide a place where children and adults can come and learn about how the creative process works and why it is so important," Plusquellic said. "I think it's important that it will be showcasing the talents of those who have done so much to help all of society."

Inventure Place, which will also include classrooms, meeting areas, a food service operation and a gift shop, is expected to attract 325,000 visitors a year, officials said. A National Invention Center study estimates Inventure Place will contribute $18 million annually to the economy.

The campaign to build Inventure Place began in 1987, when Akron was selected as the home of the National Inventors Hall of Fame. The hall was founded in 1973 by the National Intellectual Property Law Associations and the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

The center was formed to develop Inventure Place, which will also become the site for the hall of fame's annual inductions.

Test may identify Alzheimer's

by Paul Recer
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- A laboratory skin test developed at the National Institutes of Health may identify people with Alzheimer's disease, a mind-destroying disorder that now cannot be positively diagnosed until after death, researchers said Tuesday.

The test could save a great deal of money, shield patients from having to undergo extensive testing, and help doctors quickly distinguish those with a fatal disease from those with treatable forms of impairment, said Dr. Daniel L. Alkon, a researcher at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

"If this test fulfills its promise, it should have an immediate positive impact on our health care delivery system because we can save hundreds of millions of dollars in diagnostic evaluations," Alkon said.

The test is based on the discovery that the brain cells in Alzheimer's disease patients develop a flaw that closes up a microscopic pore, or channel, through which flows a form of potassium.

Alkon said researchers speculated that if this happens in brain cells, why not other cells in the body? With that in mind, the NIH team tested cells taken from tissues in the nose and from the skin. In both cases, he said, the test showed that the potassium channels were collapsed in tissue from Alzheimer's patients.

Alkon's team then treated cells with chemicals that cause microscopic sparks in healthy cells. Where the potassium channels were closed, in the Alzheimer's cells, there were no sparks.

JoAnn McConnell, senior vice president for medical and scientific affairs of the Alzheimer's Association, said that if the validity of the diagnostic test can be proven it would be important in dealing with the disease, but she warned that other promising tests for Alzheimer's have been disappointing.

"We are guardedly optimistic about this," she said. "There have been a number of tests for biological markers which have been proven to not be true."

"It would be very beneficial to doctors to determine exactly what the disease entity is because there are many forms of dementia that are treatable," said McConnell. "If you could rule out Alzheimer's then you could explore seriously the other possibilities."

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive disorder that gradually destroys memory, the ability to function, and, eventually, life itself. There now is no treatment and the disease always is fatal. An estimated 2.5 million to 4 million Americans have the disease and McConnell said it is expected that number will triple within 20 years.

Currently, Alzheimer's disease can be diagnosed with certainty only after an autopsy.

"When an individual comes to a clinic with memory loss, the diagnosis for Alzheimer's can be made only after a long and exhaustive series of tests that eliminate every other cause of dementia," said Alkon. "It is an expensive, intensive process with inaccuracies" of 20 percent to 30 percent.

By assessing the potassium channels in the skin, Alkon said doctors could determine with one test whether a patient has Alzheimer's disease.

To perform the test, Alkon said cells are scraped from a patient's skin and then cultured in the laboratory. The cells are then tested with an electrical probe to determine if the potassium channels are open.

Open channels have a particular electrical signature on the instrument.

As second step, Alkon said his team applied a special dye that would cause normal cells to glow when they are bathed in calcium. Cells with closed potassium channel would remain dark.

"If the potassium channel is working, we see a calcium flash in the microscope," he said.

The light flashes can be converted to electrical signals, which then are processed through a computer into color-coded pictures, said Alkon.

Other tests would determine if so-called molecular switches are working within the cells, he said. These minute switches act on the flow of potassium and other chemicals into and out of the cell.

Alkon said that the Alzheimer's tests were conducted on 50 cell samples, including some from patients with other forms of dementia. He said the researchers were able to correctly determine which specimens were from Alzheimer's disease patients and which came from patients without the disease.

The study misidentified only two patients using the electrical probe, but when the whole battery of skin tests were used, Alzheimer's patients were correctly identified in all cases, said Alkon.

The researcher said that a much larger experiment now planned will use enough patients to statistically verify the skin test. It will also help to determine if the test can be used to detect the disease at a stage before the symptoms of memory loss develop, he said.

A report on the research is to be published Wednesday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Giants try to hold off Atlanta

The Associated Press

ATLANTA -- The Atlanta Braves hold the trump card as they begin their second critical NL West series in a week against the San Francisco Giants Tuesday at home.

Three of their pitching aces are ready for the staggering Giants, who have been beset by injuries.

The Giants still held a four-game lead going into their game Monday night against the Florida Marlins. But San Francisco has seen a 10-game advantage over the Braves on July 22 shrink after Atlanta's three-game sweep at San Francisco last week.

The two-time defending NL champion Braves, who were idle Monday, have won seven of eight and 16 of their last 19 games.

"Atlanta's not the type of team you want to go down to the wire with," Giants first baseman Todd Benzinger said, after San Francisco beat the Marlins 9-3 Sunday night.

Greg Maddux (15-9) will open the series for the Braves Tuesday night against Bill Swift (17-6).

"San Francisco's in the driver's seat," said Maddux, who beat the Giants 9-1 last week, pitching a six-hitter over eight innings to complete the sweep.

"I'd rather face the pressure of maintaining a lead, than chasing a leader. I'd trade places with them right now."

Atlanta's John Smoltz (13-9) will face Bryan Hickerson (6-5) Wednesday night and Steve Avery (15-4) and 3-0 against the Giants this season opposes John Burkett (18-6) in the series finale Thursday night.

"The Giants have to be feeling the heat," Smoltz said. "Burkett and Swift have never pitched so many innings, and the other two starters are out. We have four healthy guys who've pitched a lot of innings, so surely we have to have the pitching advantage."

The Giants' third and fourth starters -- Bud Black and Trevor Wilson -- are on the disabled list, along with first baseman Will Clark and center fielder Darren Lewis.

San Francisco obtained veteran pitcher Jim Deshaies from Minnesota Saturday, but he won't pitch in the Atlanta series.

Giants manager Dusty Baker said the law of averages is with his team.

The Braves have 31 games remaining, San Francisco had 33 left entering Monday's game. The teams have split the 10 games they have played this year, and Thursday's game is their last meeting of the season.

Bowling Green volleyball team festivities begin

by Mike Kazimore
sports writer

selves and are all anxious to get the season under way.

Strike up the band! The festivities start tonight as the Bowling Green volleyball team enters the 1993 campaign with hopes of three-peat as MAC champions.

However, the road to the conference title won't be an easy one for the BG spikers as they will start their season with what could arguably be called the toughest schedule in team history.

The first opponent that will try to ruffle up the Falcons will be the perennial PAC-10 powerhouse Washington Huskies. The Huskies will invade Andersen Arena to do battle with BG tonight at 7:30.

Before the game, last years record-setting team will be honored with banners commemorating their second straight MAC title and second-place finish in the National Invitational Volleyball Tournament.

Unfortunately, those banners will be the only reminders of last year's team as the Falcons starting lineup, decimated by graduation, will only feature one familiar face, that of senior Nicky Mudrak.

Although many people around the MAC are expecting the Falcons to have a down year, head coach Denise Van de Walle said that she and her players are confident in them-

"We've had a very competitive preseason," Van de Walle said. "The team is very excited that they're now getting a chance to play someone other than themselves in order to see how they're doing."

How BG does will depend heavily upon how fast the fledgling Falcons will be able to come together and gel as a team. This is something that often takes time for young squads.

Fortunately for BG, they will be facing a team that will also be featuring a lineup of new faces as the Huskies ranks were also depleted by the inevitableness of graduation. Washington lost four of their six starters from last year's squad.

Van de Walle won't be looking past the Huskies though, as she knows that Washington head coach Bill Neville will have his team more than prepared to face the Falcons.

"They have a great coach in Bill Neville," Van de Walle said. "He was the assistant coach of our men's Olympic team back in '84 when they won the gold medal. He's just done a tremendous amount of work in the game so I expect him to have a good program."

"But, I've never seen Washington play, so were kind of going into this blindly," Van de Walle said.

U.S. Open top seeds struggle

The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) Stefan Edberg lay sprawled on the court, knocked down at the net by a blistering backhand to his head. He rose slowly, like a boxer at the count of nine.

And just as slowly, gasping for air even in mild heat, seeking shade under a blue umbrella held by a ballboy on changeovers, Edberg struggled back exactly as he did time after time a year ago to win his second straight U.S. Open.

No defending men's champion ever lost in the first round of the U.S. Open, much less a two-time defending champ like Edberg. Yet on Tuesday he barely avoided that dubious distinction, surviving 6-2, 0-6, 7-6 (9-7), 5-7, 6-3 in a 3-hour drama against 99th-ranked Olivier Delaitre.

Less fortunate was Jennifer Capriati, the women's No. 7 seed, drummed out in the first round by Leila Meskhi, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4.

"I couldn't believe I could get totally off after the first set when I played great," said Capriati, who punched a forehead long to end an 18-shot rally on the final point. That was Capriati's 61st unforced error, more than double Meskhi's total.

Bye-bye, too, went men's No. 6 Michael Stich, the second men's seed to lose, succumbing to Henrik Holm, 6-3, 7-6 (10-8), 3-6, 6-3.

Not all the top players had a tough time. No. 1 Jim Courier dispatched Marco Aurelio Gorris 6-1, 6-3, 6-3; No. 7 Michael Chang beat Shelby Cannon 6-1, 7-5, 6-2, and No. 12 Thomas Muster downed Alex Corretja 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. Women's No. 8 Jana Novotna, the Wimbledon finalist, defeated Angelica Gavaldon 6-2, 6-4.

Edberg's last loss at the Open came in the first round in 1990 against Alexander Volkov. Now Edberg seemed as if he might go that way again, playing against a man who knew all about first-round losses. Delaitre fell a dozen times in the first round of ATP tournaments, and both times in his last two Opens, before switching to the easier Challengers circuit.

On this day, though, Delaitre played well enough to take advantage of a flat champion, mixing lobs and deep topspin groundstrokes, a crushing backhand and a decent, if not overwhelming, first serve. Compact and muscular at 5-foot-8, Delaitre was a middleweight pummeling a 6-foot-2 tennis heavyweight.

Edberg's legs looked dead, his serve seemed labored, his volleys erratic. His chipping backhand betrayed him, his forehands had little pace. Linesmen called him for six foot-faults on first serves. He double-faulted 11 times.

Charging the net with Delaitre hitting a backhand from the baseline, Edberg got clipped hard on the back of the head near his left ear in the third game of the second set.

"I am normally pretty quick out there," Edberg said, "but I couldn't handle that one. He can hit ball hard. I mean, really, really hard. It was a good clean shot."

He wasn't really hurt but he hammed it up.

"I felt like lying down for a while," he said.

Bucks set for season opener

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) Everything seems to be in order heading into the final few days of preparations for Ohio State's season opener with Rice, according to Buckeye coach John Cooper.

"We're ready to play. We had a real good fall camp," said Cooper, starting his sixth year as head coach. "I don't know anything we would do differently. We had a lot of contact and came out of it with a minimum amount of injuries."

Ohio State, coming off an 8-3-1 season and second-place finish in the Big Ten, is a 15-point favorite over Rice of the Southwest Conference. The Owls were 6-5 last season - their first winning record since 1963.

Asked if the Buckeyes could be looking past Rice to a showdown with Washington the following Saturday, Cooper said, "I don't think there's any chance of that at all. We've done everything we can to keep that from happening."

Yet Ohio State quarterback Bob Hoving is looking for not just a win, but a convincing win.

"We have to dominate them for ourselves, not to show anybody else," he said. "We should beat Rice and we should beat them bad. We all know Rice has some good people and is capable of beating us. We know that, but we should beat Rice and beat them bad. That's the bottom line right there."

There's good reason not to overlook Rice. In Bert Emmanuel, the Owls boast a quarterback who can create havoc with the best of defenses. A year ago, the 5-foot-11, 180-pounder rushed for 680 yards and also was fourth in the country in passing efficiency.

"From all of the films we've seen on him, he's an outstanding athlete," Cooper said. "But more than an athlete, he's a polished quarterback."

Emmanuel originally signed with UCLA but drifted back to Rice when he came out on the short end of a quarterback duel with Tommy Maddox. He has since flourished at the 2,600-student campus in Houston.

Rice ran mostly a single-back set last year, but that was when it had tailback Trevor Cobb, who rushed for 1,386 yards a year ago.

Without Cobb as a safety valve, Cooper said Rice will be given even more responsibility.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see them line up in a shotgun," he said. "Just let him sit back there and have the time to pick out receivers."
